

Frisco Eddie's Revenge: The Return

EPISODE 75 -- A Series by Balboa Ron Schweikert

Dear Readers: As you know Balboa Ron took a brief vacation, but came back to us in the December 2000 issue and is feeling better.

Let Ron know you're glad he's back: Balboa Ron Schweikert, 1140 Coral Desert Drive, Las Vegas, NV 89123 or e-mail: balboaron@earthlink.net

Shelli and Eddie were pretty shook up after reading the note that they assumed was left under their door by Lil. It had read: "Sorry I missed you. Will be in touch... 'L'." They both started concocting weird scenarios over what implications this could have. Eddie finally suggested that they have a Brandy from the well stocked little bar they had in their Honeymoon Suite. After the second one, they crawled into bed and were able to go to sleep.

The next morning turned out to be a lazy wake up, so Eddie suggested that they just call room service and have their breakfast sent up. After he hung up the phone, he turned to Shelli and said: "It's all set honey - it'll be around 30 minutes." She looked back at him with a sexy little smile and responded with: "Well now the timing should be just about right - so why don't you just hop back in this bed so we can work up a real appetite before it arrives."

Eddie felt like making a flying leap into that king sized bed, but he quickly reminded himself about their baby that was inside Shelli. It was theirs, and only theirs, and he would guard it with his life. The marvelous time they were having passed quickly and before they knew it, there was a knock on their door.

They were both apprehensive as Eddie slipped into his robe and made his way to the door. They remembered the two notes that had been left. Eddie hollered out: "Who is it?" A male voice responded: "It's room service Sir; I have your breakfast." Eddie let out a sigh of relief then and opened the door.

The breakfast was fantastic. There was ham and sausage, with eggs and home fries, and steaming hot coffee with orange juice, and muffins with butter and honey that melted in their mouths.

After eating, Eddie put the cart outside in the hallway. When he came back in, he remembered something, and mentioned it to Shelli: "You know I just recalled, we better leave another note on that thing on the door to let the cleaning and laundry people know we have some things to pick up."

They got cleaned up a little, then while they were trying to figure out what they would do for the rest of the day Eddie made a suggestion: "You know honey, I noticed that there was a store that sold fishing gear just down the street a ways. I'd like to try a little surf fishing if that's okay with you." Shelli said that it sounded like fun, but that she better just watch. Eddie said that was great, and that they should get into their swimming gear. They could stop at that place and pick up all the stuff they would need (along with a license of course).

They were both in a real good mood now, but just as they were about to leave - there was knock on their door. They definitely weren't expecting anyone, so simultaneously they formed the notion that it must be what they had feared...Lil must be at their door!

Eddie told Shelli to get behind him, so he could "handle" this thing - once and for all. He approached the door boldly, and with a deep breath, swung open the door! To both of their surprises - it turned out to be a man! He was taken back a bit by Eddie's angry expression. The man quickly said: "I missed you folks. I'm here to pick up the laundry and dry cleaning you had asked for in your note."

Then Shelli quickly asked: "You didn't happen to leave two notes did you? Especially one yesterday that said 'Sorry I missed you, will be in touch, with an 'L' at the end of it?'" The man replied: "You're right Ma'am, I sure did leave those notes alright. The 'L' was for Laundry - I figured you would understand."

Both of them wanted to give the guy a hug - but instead, they just gathered up their things and handed them to the man. After he left, they did start hugging each other though, along with kisses and laughter! They both said out loud together "what a relief...what a relief!"
